

d. Lisez les dix articles. Inscrivez pour chacun le numéro du titre correspondant.

A. Despite concerns about a fall in consumer confidence, online purchases on websites run by conventional retailers – once considered dinosaurs of the brick-and-mortar age – are growing the fastest.
Titre n°

B. By some estimates, there are more than 30,000 people patrolling the Web in China as Wild West capitalism, crime, piracy, pornography and other problems of the real economy in China have moved into the virtual one.
Titre n°

C. BT announced plans yesterday to massively increase the speed of the nation's broadband Internet access, paving the way for its autumn launch of a video-on demand service in conjunction with the digital terrestrial broadcaster Freeview.
Titre n°

D. Parents are being warned against letting children have webcams in their bedrooms after the arrest of a Canadian accused of tricking British girls into performing sex acts for him to watch over the Internet.
Titre n°

E. Holidaymakers are being offered the opportunity to book flights or packages via a few clicks on a mobile phone with more than 25 budget airlines and several tour operators.
Titre n°

F. Sales of digital music rocketed in the week after Christmas, with British consumers downloading a record 1 million tracks to their new portable music players.
Titre n°

G. Tesco is considering selling furniture online next year in a move that would place it in direct competition with other rival retailers.
Titre n°

H. Further extending its efforts to areas beyond search technology, Google was set to announce Monday that it would offer software providing a range of online services for business users.
Titre n°

I. Looking for somewhere quiet? Bridgeville might be just the place. It has no shops, no cafés, one two-lane road and very few people. And it's to be sold on the online auction site e-Bay. Bids are invited, starting at $1.75m (£1m).
Titre n°

J. A French government project to promote computer use and the Internet amongst older people and the less well off has been launched. The new service provides details of special deals on computers, Internet access and training.
Titre n°

e. Identifiez dans chaque article, par un repérage couleur, les mots-clés qui correspondent aux mots-clés de son titre.

f. Identifiez dans chaque article les autres informations contenues dans le paragraphe.

g. Trouvez un titre pour l'article qui n'en a pas.

.....

.....